the 2nd inst. and on the 3rd inst. the schooner
Ida, and the schooner Ida, when on her passage from this port to Launceston. She put into Kent's Group for shelter and necessary repairs, and then picked up the crew of the schooner Ida, and brought them on to Lauceston, their vessel having been wrecked there some time previous—no lives lost. The above are all the particulars we are at present in possession of.—Melbourne Daily News, May 15.

The brig and schooner signalled to the southward last night had not come up the harbour
at the time of our going to press.

The Arabian, whaler, has been twenty-one months out, having left this port on the 5th September, 1848, during which period she has taken 600 barrels sperm oil; for the last 10 months she has only seen two whales, and did not fall in with any vessels, and from 179-40 to 179-30 was longer, being about 30 miles from Matheson Island.

The Dart has made a good run from Port Phillip, having left on the 19th inst., and reports the Diana having left two days before; also, that vessel and two schooners
bound for Sydney, off Wellington, on Tuesday.

The schooner William, hence the 9th inst.,
and Margaret, hence the 18th inst., have also, had not arrived up to the time of the Dart leaving. The Christina, hence the 8th inst., was entering Port Phillip Heads on the 19th.

Intelligence has been received in Melbourne of the loss of the schooner
Adelaide, Captain Pitt, of Hobart Town, bound for the above Port, on Swan Island.

The Wild Irish Girl, thirty days out, bound for Adelaide, put into Circular Head on the 18th inst., having been driven back by the late heavy gale.

The Waldegar, left Newcastle on Monday
last, for San Francisco, with coal.

On Monday last, the schooner OBSERVAN-CE, on her way to the China Sea, was seen from the journal of Captain Hogg, of the Kursumay, a Bombay ship of 1200 tons;—"October 7th, 1849. At 10 hours 20 minutes A.M., saw Kursumay, a Bombay ship of 1200 tons,
at N. by E.; steering south to pass to the westward of Pulo Suputa. Saw a rock or shoal ahead, distant half a mile from the ship;
put the helm up, and passed a quarter of a mile to the westward. Went on to the Kursumay, as accurately as I could, the extent of the shoal, which did not exceed one-quarter of a mile. There was no sea on to break over it at the time; but by the colour and motion of the water there could not have been more than one or one and a half fathoms over it (then ebb). When Pulo Suputa bore south-by-east half-west, Pulo Ceein bore north-by-east half-west, and the Kursumay bore southwest, the shoal bore east-by-north half-west, distant three-quarters of a mile, giving in latitude 10-17 north, and longitude 108-07 30 east. Having no account of such a shoal any of the boats, and no chart, I am led to suppose it has escaped the vigilance of all who have passed and repassed this way before;
if so, I shall claim the privilege of naming it
the Kursumay's shoal, in honour of the owner of the ship Kursumay."

The report of M. Casimir Perier on the bill to re-establish the commercial treaty between France and Belgium was distributed yesterday. To it is affixed a table of the general commercial movement between the two countries, from which it appears that the number of vessels has remained stationary, the number of French vessels for importation was 53, of Belgian 8, and others 16. For exportation the French vessels were 50, Belgian 12, and others 116. Thus the trade has remained stationary, and has not ceased to profit by the Belgian trade at the expense of that of France and Belgium herself, and it is to put an end to state of things that the treaty has been proposed. The bill points out that all the objections to the treaty, but intimates that they are not of sufficient importance to require the re-opening of negotiations, and therefore recommends the ratification of the treaty. It was read yesterday to the Committee of Public Assistance the first part of his report on the bill.

The Courriere says:— "M. Casimir Perier has forwarded to the Legislative Assembly the following project:— 'In my quality of French citizen, I demand that France, in order to enter into the Union des Nations, Louis Lecomte Bonaparte—like my uncle Joseph Bonaparte, and like my first cousin Louis Napoleon Bonaparte.'"

I am assured that in the course of conversation yesterday with some of the members of the Finance Commission, M. Fould, the Minister of Finance, declared that, with the money he is to receive from the Bank of France and the amount expected from the Paris and Avignon Railway Company, he will be enabled to balance the budget for 1850 without any deficit, and that so soon as this is effected he will at once set about preparing the budget for 1851.

La Patrie announces that M. Guizot has declared himself a candidate for the representation of the Charante.

"You will have seen by the returns of the deposits of the Paris Savings Banks for last week, submitted to the Council of the Prefecture, that comparatively little difference between the amount of deposits on Sunday and yesterday, and those of the few previous weeks. They will be about forty per cent. more than the amount paid up during the period of the Christmas holidays. Though the season for making presents has passed, and it can no longer be said that the Caisse receives its principal aliment from the gifts of the public, it is not less than to its keeping for the last two days is not less than 110,000fr.—the proceeds of the savings of 4287 working men, of whom 683 now, for the first time, give this proof of their devotion to the cause of the poor. The sums withdrawn continue also to be comparatively small, viz., 89,071fr. I think there is no more pleasing symptom, I will not say of prosperity, but of the little disposition that exists amongst the working classes towards insurrection or disorder."

"There was scarcely any business transacted at the Bourse to-day. The Five per Cent. Consols, closed at 117. 1/2. The Three per Cent. closed at 57. 5/8c. Orleans Railroad shares, 830fr.; Rouen, 552fr. 50c.; Havre, 247fr. 50c.; Great Northern, 668fr.; Avignon, 215fr.; Vierzon, 330fr.; Nantes, 118fr. 50c.; Lyons, 350fr.; Valenciennes, 350fr.; Tours and Nantes, 270fr."

AUSTRIA.

VIENNA, JANUARY 17th. The provisional constitution for the Duchy of Upper and Lower Silesia, which appeared in the Wiener Zeitung, yesterday, differs but little from those previously published for the other Crown-lands. The Austrian note of the 14th inst. reproaches the Conservative interest, which is the most prominent feature in the late ecrois, remains unchanged, and accordingly one third of the Silesian provincial deputies will be chosen from amongst those paying the highest amount of taxes (£50).

In several of my letters I have informed you that the old Conservative Hungarian party is anything but favourable to the measures of the present Cabinet of Ministers, and that they do so two or three times, more to be sure, but positively affirmed, as no overt marks of hostility had been given; but now a Mr. de Somach, who has dubbed himself the champion of that party, has been heard to utter the following remarks, in which he is pleased to designate as the "Vienna Cabinet." The grievance which has more immediately induced M. de Somach thus to open rupture with the Government, is the recent separation of the Temeswar Banat and Batsch-Bodrogh County from the Crown lands of Hungary. The Reichszeitung, in a very long article, not only refutes the assertions of the Hungarian nobles, who reproach the Government with the selfish intention which he represents with the selfish intention they displayed during the fourteen years immediately preceding the revolution, the selfish intention during the late radical political movement, and without claims to special consideration now that the battle has been fought out by other hands. The Reichszeitung doubts that the Ultra-Conservative party is influenced by any such intention, and is insistent on the necessity of insuring the future prosperity of Hungary, it was unfavourable to the preparatory measures of Government, such as the levying of taxes upon the nobility, the emancipation of the peasantry, and the concentration of the Executive power, as opposed to the peculiar privileges of self-government arrogated to themselves by the counties. The writer of the article, who is a Magyar noble, and proceeds with his subject, adds "that this party deserves its name only inasmuch as it wishes to retain what is conducive to its own wealth, namely, feudalism, exemption from taxation, and certain rights of the nobles, such as statute duty, tithes, and other aristocratic laws which are to be found in the much lauded constitution of 1848." It is further stated that it was not the Magyars alone who freed Hungary from the Turkish yoke, but that Serbians and Germans having shed their blood in the struggle, the former received permission to take up the arms of the Emperor, the latter, while the latter were allowed to form settlements in the various parts of Hungary." This is probably by way of reply to the condemnation of the Magyar nobles, and the Magyar Minister who does not look back with unmitigated grief at the Revolution which their revolution took, there is not one who does not feel that a return to the ante-Magyar system is a moral impossibility. The inconsistency which has been continually thrown out against the sincerity of the Magyar Minister has not shaken my confidence, and I can but repeat my conviction that it is his great wish, and his only intention to carry out the measures which he has proposed, and that though the experiment fail, the blame will certainly rest rather with the nation than with its rulers.

Pesth Zeitung contains the following notices which have been published by the Court Martial at Arad. All those condemned were Austrian officers who had fought to the last in the Hungarian army; twenty-three of these unfortunate men were sentenced to death, and have had their punishment commuted to sixteen years' imprisonment; the others will be confined in a fortress for six, ten, and twelve years.

I learn from an authentic source that the diplomatic relations between Austria and Turkey are about to be resumed. It is probable that I may in my next letter be able to give some more interesting account of what has actually taken place in the negotiation question—that is, as far as Austria and Turkey are concerned—than has until now met the public eye.

We have been snowed in for the last two days in such a way that no mails have arrived.

CENTRAL GERMANY.

The Deutsche Zeitung has a paragraph from Frankfurt of the 14th inst., stating that General Radowitz has received an electric despatch summoning him to Berlin, and that his place in the Central Commission is being filled up by General Peucker, the Prussian commander in Carlsruhe.

SPAIN.

Our accounts from Madrid are of the 16th inst. The discussion on the authorisation to collect the taxes during the year 1850 continued yesterday, the Deputy, Don Juan de Mendizabal, proposed the amendment of M. Nocedal, limiting the period to three months, was rejected by 106 to 85. At the hour of post M. Moron was developing another amendment to the effect of modifying the relations between the Government and the taxation, and reducing the public expenses by 100,000,000 reals.

The Three per Cent. was done at 29fr. for paper, the Four per Cent. at 32fr. The Five per Cent. Dutch without Interest, at 315; and the Coupons at 7 1/2.

DENMARK AND THE DUCHIES.

The Constitutionelle Zeitung contains a short notice of a letter to the King of Denmark, stating that the negotiation for a peace between Denmark and Prussia commenced on the 17th inst.

The trustees of the Schleswig estates, on the 27th inst. had addressed a letter to the King of Denmark, in which they inform him of the readiness to co-operate with the King's Commissioners for the termination of the fatal distinction, for, for two years, existing between the Kingdom of Denmark and the Duchy of Schleswig. They promise to devote themselves to the task of a mutual pacification to the best of their abilities; but they express their regret that the King's Commissioners should be obtained without an upright and earnest desire on the part of the Danish Commissioners for a final termination of the woful state of doubt and incertitude which weighs down upon the Schleswig estates.

No reply had on the 11th instant been received to this address.

MR. COBDEN—PROTECTION—FOREIGN LOANS.

(From the Morning Chronicle, January 17.)

We wish we could prevail upon Mr. Cobden to leave his head out of his chest, and to deliver his services, though not actually necessary, will at all events be highly desirable, in repelling the threatened Protectionist onslaught against Free-trade and common sense. We were at one time promised that Mr. Cobden would speak the other day at Aylesbury, that he was really beginning to repair (or regain) his former influence over the public mind, by the publication of his new book, which he has acquired—namely, by close and vigorous logic, by homely and telling illustrations of economic truths, and by that wit which has its root in a shrewd appreciation of absurdity and humbug. We were promised that he would take the American President's Message quietly, and did not (as we had feared he would) rush into print to denounce the sin of subservience to the war-loan—that he would fray the coats of the raid on Mexico, and very likely all might have gone on well if this unlucky Russian loan had not come in the way. But the Emperor wants money—it is said, for the purchase of the Central Asia, the Caucasus and Moscow railway—and comes to English capitalists, amongst others, for an advance; and forthwith there is an end, for the present, of Mr. Cobden's good temper and good sense. He is now so completely crumpled up, that he is unable to do more than maintain himself at the thought of seeing the Potentate whom he so recently "crumpled up," admitted to the ordinary civilities of the money market, and to the necessity of being so exasperated at the notion of capitalists daring to accommodate an applicant of whose political morals he happens to have formed an unfavourable opinion. Accordingly, down he sits in hot haste, and writes a long and angry letter to the Secretary of the Peace Congress (these Universal Pacification gentlemen can never say anything likelier, quite other folks) in which he denounces the Emperor's advances, outrages to the moral sense, infamous transactions, patriots, blood-money, and reprobation. In compliance with the suggestion with which the letter concludes, a public meeting is to be held on the 20th inst., at which the purpose of directing the moral force of menace and bullying against any delinquent capitalist who may mediate investing his money without asking leave of his fellow-citizens for his species.

We speak lightly of this business, not because we have not a very strong opinion of its audacious and unwarrantable character, but because its extreme absurdity will go far to render it almost contemptible in the eyes of Mr. Cobden's own reputation. Happily, England is not a country in which alarums-dennunciations count for much; and any attempt to get to the bottom of the matter, and to the proper way to lay out the money without consulting the firm of Cobden, Pease, and Co., will merely recoil on its authors. The commercial sense and spirit of London will scorn this dictatorial interference, and will be glad to see the Emperor be under a wholesome conviction, that the act of giving any other than a verbal expression to what is called their "moral sense" would be viewed in a very ugly light by the central committee of the Peace Congress, and that if money, if security is considered good, and the rate of interest sufficient—and nothing will come of the affair except big words which will be blown away by the next breeze, and that account the less hateful. This attempt to bring public intimidation to bear on private persons' management of their cash transactions—to hold up individuals to popular odium for the sake of their liberal and independent opinions, which neither the law of the land nor the law of nations condemns—to set up an organized terrorism at the centre of the world's commerce, and to attempt to influence the conduct of men, whatever their politics, are interested in, is certainly not a little strange, that the most outrageous interference with commercial liberty which these times have witnessed, should be attempted by the Free-trade leader, and that the only decided war movement of the day should be got up by the Peace party.

For our own part, we like foreign loans, and we are not at all disposed to condemn the Government for our countrymen have too commonly found this class of speculations extremely unprofitable—though our losses have mostly arisen, by the way, from transactions, not with the Government, but with the Emperor, and the autocracies, and the despotic monarchies; and at a moment when England, Scotland, Ireland, the Cape, and Australia are each crying out "Come, till me," it is not altogether a pleasant reflection that three millions of our available capital are going to be locked up in foreign securities. As a matter of general national policy likewise, there may perhaps be something to be said against the Government's policy of increasing and creditor relations, on a large scale, between foreign Governments and the subjects of Great Britain. However, it is of no use to us to suggest private means to carry on their private business, on patriotic or commercial principles; and we suppose—looking at the price which Russian securities bear at this moment on the Stock Exchange, and which may be compared with the value of the commercial value on their true value—that the Emperor will get his money here or elsewhere, without any serious difficulty. If, indeed, Mr. Cobden happens to be acquainted with any circumstances of the Emperor's private financial or political position of the Russian Empire, which may be useful in guiding the judgment of his countrymen as to the real and probable value of the securities, he will, we think, be well to do, in the public service by disclosing them, and we shall be among the first to thank him for throwing cold water on a hazardous speculation. But he is not a man who is used to business, and that nothing but facts will carry a feather's weight in the opinion of the commercial world. As for "crumpling up" Russia, it is a word which is one which would decidedly lose by its repetition.

However, Mr. Cobden has already in a manner committed himself to treat the question in his worst style of rant and bluster, and we suppose he will go through with it—especially as he has already said, in any case, any man who ever aspired to enduring influence, to have a perfect mania for reminding the being guilty. We fear there is no help for it. The Free-trade leader, within a fortnight of the opening of a session during which he will have to battle stoutly for the principle of commercial liberty, will (according to present appearance) be a defenceless man. It is certainly very unfortunate that he will get into these scrapes, just at the moment, of all others, when it is most desirable that his name and voice should carry weight and authority with sober-minded people.

SUBSTITUTE FOR COFFEE.

BREAKFAST TABLE TALK.

Guest.—What delicious Coffee! where did you buy it?

Host.—Why at the New Coffee Depôt, opposite the Barrack Gate, CAMPBELL is the name of the Proprietor.

Guest.—But how do you account for its tasting so different from the Coffee generally sold?

Host.—That in a great measure is in consequence of the new method of roasting.

Guest.—I have heard a great deal about Campbell's newly invented Cylindrical Machine, but never imagined that Coffee could be made so delicious!

Host.—But that is not the only reason—EDWIN CAMPBELL never buys bad Coffee. He always gets a Sample in the State, the finest in Sydney! Don't you taste the Mocha?

Guest.—It certainly is the best I ever drank either at home or abroad; but still I cannot understand why it should be so!

Host.—Well, I will just explain to you the whole affair:—I have now been here eleven years, have tried every grocer in Sydney, but could never get good Coffee. Some of them profess to roast it, and use the latest applied method, the old-fashioned boxes, and use the best of the handle, and round it goes, nobody pays the slightest attention to it; it is taken out at a certain time; if the fire is too much, it burns to a cinder; if a small fire, it is not done; if the fire is too much, it is mixed; they vainly suppose, that an equal quantity of overdone, and not enough done, will bring it to perfection. Another reason is, that the majority of them are not particular what quality they purchase; and against forty-nine out of fifty were not Grocers at all before they came to Sydney, therefore cannot be supposed to use good judgment in buying their Coffee. Take, for Example, like a man who has gained his experience in the first London houses.

Guest.—Your arguments are certainly convincing; but how can you know the Proprietor of the New Coffee Depôt is an exception from these?

Host.—Does not the Coffee convince you? Look at that Sugar and And if you will favour me with your patronage, this evening, you shall taste a new mixture he has just introduced—each pound is sealed and stamped Campbell's Mixture; and he only charges one Shilling per pound—of it, the Coffee is Ten times as good; but it is cheaper at that price than that usually sold would be at six pence.

Guest.—Be good enough to give me the address!

Host.—Oh! certainly. But be particular as, through an unfortunate similarity of names, others try to claim connexion, thereby misleading the public.
